STEP 1:

Get five pieces of blank white paper and a thick marker (preferably black or red color).

Like this:

STEP 2:

Using the thick marker, write the name of one family member on each piece of paper. For example, "Mommy", "Daddy", "Grandpa", "Grandma" and "Joey". It could have names of cousins, brothers, sisters, etc. Choose the five names you think your child will enjoy most.

Spencer Doman shows the word "Mommy"

STEP 3:

Write the words by writing the first letter in uppercase and the rest in lower case like "Mommy", "Daddy", "Sally", etc.

STEP 4:

Now that your words are created, you can begin to teach your child to read them! Before starting to show the words, tell your child how the words are related to each other. For example, say, "Now we're going to see the names of our family!"

STEP 5:

Then start to show the words. Hold up each word and quickly read each word to your child. Show the words quickly, holding up each word for 1-2 seconds each. The session to show the five words should take you only 10 seconds. Do not take longer than this or you might bore your child.

STEP 6:

Watch this 3-minute video of Spencer Doman showing a set of words.

STEP 7:

After you have finished showing the fifth word, say: "All done! Great job!" and clap for your child. Hugs and kisses are optional ;-)

STEP 8:

Show the words 3 times on the first day. Repeat this for 5 consecutive days! If you show the words 3 times daily for 5 days, this means your child will see the names of family members 15 times before you finish!

STEP 9:

What you do in between sessions matters too! Click here for Spencer's 4 steps on what to do between sessions.
